Hocus-Pocus

With just 75 seats in the space, you can get intimately close to Dan White's tricks in his show "The Magician" at the NoMad Hotel. But despite an up-close view—or even participating in the act yourself—you won't have a clue how the magician, who has worked with David Blaine, David Copperfield and even Kanye West, completes his deceptive feats of visual and mental intrigue. Without giving too much away, White seems to levitate his assistant off the ground, inherently know what destination an audience member is thinking of and bring it up on their iPhone map, and perform extraordinary card tricks. Clearly, this modern Houdini has more than a few tricks up his sleeve. | NoMad Hotel, 1170 Broadway, 212.796.1500

Games Gone Wild

If battling zombies from "The Walking Dead," chasing ghosts in Pac-Man and racing your way to victory in Mario Kart sounds like a night out, you're in luck at Dave & Buster's. The Times Square arcade boasts more than 100 video games in a flashy, casino-like environment. Set your kids up with a few game cards—they will love trying games like Dance Dance Revolution, Tailgate Toss and Pop-A-Shot and collecting tickets for prizes. Dave & Buster's also has a stacked bar and plenty of shareable snacks (pretzel-wrapped hot dogs, mini spareribs and cheesy spinach dip) that will satisfy any gaming-induced craving. Pro tip: Downing a couple of "Coronaritas" (bottles of Corona dunked in frozen margaritas) will make your Skee-Ball competitions all the more epic. | 234 W. 42nd St., 3rd fl., 646.495.2015

Swanky Digs

The interior design at the Upper East Side's Mark Bar is just as exciting as the drinks. Esteemed French designer Jacques Grange, who has decorated for fashion moguls Valentino Garavani, Karl Lagerfeld and Yves Saint Laurent, put his distinctive touch on every inch of the unabashedly swanky space, from the cowhide lounge chairs and chrome tables shaped like spots on cows to the twinkling ceiling lights and curvy backlit bar that's cool enough for James Bond himself. The expertly crafted drink menu puts creative twists on the classics. (Clockwise from bottom): The margarita is rimmed with ginger-salt for a zingy kick; the old-fashioned explodes with sour cherry flavor and the martini complements the flavors of gin botanicals with fresh cucumber and mint. | 25 E. 77th St., 212.606.3030
