Fashion and travel go hand in hand. After all, what is a hotel but the ultimate dressing room: a place to see and be seen, wear your best outfits, and, ideally, check out with at least a few souvenirs to bring home? The best hotels for fashion lovers, however, offer something beyond beautiful interiors and a well-placed boutique. They have history, connections, and offer their guests insider access. From the Ferragamo family's elegant Italian hideaways to Parisian palaces to sun-drenched escapes in Bali, these are the hotels where fashion isn't just window dressing—it's part of the experience.

The Mark

The Mark is where New York's fashion scene feels totally alive. Its Bergdorf Goodman connection is legendary: guests can summon personal shoppers and, rumor has it, gain access to the store after hours. The real coup, however, is its role as the staging venue of choice for attendees of the Met Gala, where VIPs catching taxis from its front entrance has become almost as anticipated and exciting as arrivals on the gala's red carpet itself. Fashion at The Mark exists beyond the first Monday in May, however—its Mark Bar is Upper East Side society's go-to gathering place for nightcaps.
